

Glossary of Operational Terminology, Sept. 1964, SECRET/NOFORN

INTELLIGENCE: (1) A generic term applied to the whole field of activities undertaken by a government through its various departments in the collection of information, action, and the conduct of non-attributable activities to facilitate the formation and implementation of foreign policy. See: COUNTERINTELLIGENCE: ESPIONAGE: COVERT ACTION OPERATIONS. (2) A term more narrowly used to denote POSITIVE INTELLIGENCE (q.v.).

COUNTERINTELLIGENCE: Defense against hostile intelligence and counterintelligence activity, embracing the total range of measures designed to protect information against espionage, individuals against subversion, and installations against penetration and sabotage. Counterintelligence includes:

COUNTERESPIONAGE: Identifying, penetrating, manipulating or repressing inimical espionage organizations.

Those aspects of COUNTERSABOTAGE and COUNTERSUBVERSION (q.v.) exclusively designed to insulate the sponsor's employees from subversion and its installations from ~~espionage~~ sabotage.

ESPIONAGE: That intelligence activity which is directed toward the acquisition of information through clandestine operations.

Intelligence Training - Glossary of Terms, 1960, Air Force Publication, Unclassified

Intelligence	That knowledge or information which has been evaluated and interpreted in terms of the capabilities, limitations, vulnerabilities, and probable intentions of the enemy or potential enemy.
Counterintelligence	The activities taken to prevent enemy intelligence from accomplishing its mission; any organization carrying out such activities.

Categories of Intelligence

Basic Intelligence	Intelligence of a general nature concerned with more or less permanent matters, for use in background evaluations.
Air Intelligence	Military intelligence appraising or evaluating foreign or enemy capabilities, limitations, vulnerabilities, and intentions as they relate to the command and employment of air power.
Combat Intelligence	Military intelligence used in conducting combat operations and either developed from combat information or produced by a higher headquarters. The organization providing combat intelligence.
Communication Intelligence	Intelligence developed from listening in on, intercepting, or observing enemy or potential enemy communication transmissions. The organization that gathers and develops this intelligence.
Covert Intelligence	Intelligence arising from information gleaned by covert operations.
Crash Intelligence	Intelligence developed from the study of crashed aircraft; whether friendly, enemy or neutral; an organization or activity providing this intelligence.

- Current Intelligence Intelligence of immediate value to users which is usually furnished them without complete evaluation and interpretation in order to avoid delay.
- Medical Intelligence Intelligence in regard to the problems of health that may be encountered by friendly forces entering enemy territory.
- Military Intelligence Intelligence concerned with military aspects of international conflict or with actual military operations as distinguished from political or diplomatic intelligence or from strategic intelligence. An intelligence agency under the direction and control of a military organization. An army intelligence agency as distinguished from an air intelligence agency or naval intelligence agency.
- Strategic Intelligence Intelligence pertaining to the capabilities, limitations, vulnerabilities, and probable courses of action (or reaction) of foreign or enemy nations; used in carrying out national security measures, in conducting foreign policy, or in conducting military operations.
- Tactical Intelligence Intelligence that bears upon the capabilities, limitations, vulnerabilities, and probable intentions or reactions of a hostile force; either air or surface.
- Technical Intelligence Intelligence pertaining to foreign or enemy technological developments capable of or having a practical application to warfare.

Regarding Intelligence Glossary:

AT Spoke with [] in the Library who gave me the following information:

She has four publications you might be interested in.

The two in the Historical Collection which are unclassified are:

- a. Military Intelligence - Foreign Conventional ~~Science~~ ~~and~~ Signs and symbols, 1942 publication, War Department
- ✓ b. Intelligence Training - Glossary of Terms, 1960, Air Force Publication

The other two are in the main Lib~~ar~~ary, and are classified secret.

- a. Abbreviations of Intelligence Interest, put out by the Agency. 1956 publication. (Confidential)
- ✓ b. Glossary of Operational Terminology, put out by Agency/ OTR, 1964.

If you want to pursue the matter further the Operations School Library, part of OTR, may have more information. []

ST